The 60th Motorized Infantry Division fought in the summer offensives of 1942 as part of Army Group South, where it advanced to Stalingrad. In early 1943, it was caught in the great encirclement and destroyed. The division was rebuilt around surviving members who had been on leave or wounded and became the 60th Panzergrenadier. Transferred back to the Russian front, the division was destroyed for good near Minsk in July of 1944.
