The 90th Light Division was still frequently called the Africa Division, due to its having been formed in Africa from spare parts. Used as a mobile reserve, it took heavy losses in the battle and the retreat. Though the division did not receive the armored battalion it was supposed to have, it was liberally supplied with anti-tank guns. The soldiers of the 2nd New Zealand considered this division to be their special foes as they faced off against each other on several occasions.
